Bruce Grove spruce-up plans get the go-ahead from council

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

THE green light has been given to a modern makeover of Tottenham's tatty-looking Bruce Grove railway station.

Striking images of how the station, on the corner of Bruce Grove and High Road, Tottenham, will look following the revamp were released last week after Haringey Council granted planning approval for Network Rail's scheme.

The station's forecourt, which is set back from High Road, had been occupied until earlier this year by illegal street traders and fly-tipping and litter had given it a scruffy appearance.

The spruce-up will see the forecourt and a long boarded-up entrance fronting on to High Road replaced by a stylish one-and-a-half-storey-high copper-coloured steel and glass façade with a raised roof, which will connect the listed Victorian station and its existing ticket office built in 1872.

It will provide a new café or restaurant as well as additional entrances and a ticketing concourse.

The scheme, however, does not include step-free access to the station's elevated platforms which many elderly and disabled travellers complain stops them using it as they cannot climb the stairs.

Although Network Rail owns the station, the building, stairwells and ticket hall are leased to the train operating company running the services.

The lease was transferred from Greater Anglia to London Overground – the Transport for London franchise – in May this year and any changes to the operational station are its responsibility.

Network Rail's design for the station's new façade does leave room for a lift to be installed in the future.

Plans for the facelift were finalised after a five-month consultation over Tottenham's future last year with residents saying they would like to see new places to eat and drink in Bruce Grove.

The council believes the new station will become a local landmark and act as a catalyst for regenerating Bruce Grove.

Alan Strickland, cabinet member for housing and regeneration, said: "I'm excited to see this stunning new building move a step closer, bringing some striking modern architecture to Tottenham. Residents have been clear that they want to see better places to eat and drink on the High Road and this impressive new space could be home to a high-quality business — as well as giving passengers the station entrance they deserve."

The station's upgrade is the latest in a string of improvements to the area, including the refurbishment of nearby Holcombe Road Market approved last month.

Prison warning for nightclub owner playing on without a music licence

A NIGHTCLUB owner caught illegally playing recorded music on the premises without a licence has been warned by a High Court judge that he will go to jail if he does it again.

Bryan John, the owner of the Socialite Bar, in Muswell Hill Broadway, received a suspended 28-day prison sentence and was ordered to pay £19,000 after breaching a previous injunction imposed, the court heard, after he had "persisently" failed to comply with the legal requirement for a licence, despite repeated warnings ment for a licence, despite repeated warnings Mr Justice Arnold, sitting at the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand, in central London, ordered Mr John to pay £4,000, plus £15,000 costs, to PPL (Phonographic Performance Ltd), the non-profit-making organisation which collects licence fees for public performances of music and distributes the cash to record companies, recording artists and musicians.

All pubs, clubs, factories, schools, universities, gyms and commercial premises where music is played publicly require a licence.

Christine Geissmar, PPL's operations director, said: "This ruling demonstrates how seriously the courts treat copyright infringement and reiterates that music can only be played in public if the right licences are obtained. Those businesses that choose to play recorded music without a licence will face legal action and possibly hefty financial and other consequences as a result."

Plumber faces Hatton Garden jewel heist trial

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

Twitter @NrthLondonNews

ENFIELD plumber Hugh Doyle and three others accused of involvement in the Hatton Garden jewel heist last Easter will hear the prosecution case against them next week

The four are standing trial at Woolwich Crown Court.

The jury was sworn in on Tuesday with legal argument taking up most of yesterday (Wednesday)

The Crown's opening statement is predicted to last more than two days.

The trial, before Judge Christoper Kinch, is expected to last four weeks.

Heating engineer Doyle, 48, of Riverside Gardens, faces a charge of concealing, converting or transferring jewellery or other stolen goods between April 1 and May 19, 2015.

He also faces an alternative charge of conspiracy to convert or transfer criminal property between January 1 and May 19, 2015

He was granted conditional bail at a pretrial hearing last Thursday.

Three other men appearing with Doyle all deny a charge of conspiracy to burgle the Hatton Garden Safe Deposit company, in central London.

William Lincoln, 60, of Bethnal Green, east London, Jon Harbinson, 42, from Benfleet, Essex, and Carl Wood, 58, of Elderbeck Close, in Cheshunt, Hertfordshire, all also deny a charge of conspiracy to conceal, convert or transfer property.

Enfield residents Terry Perkins, 67, of Heene Road, and 58-year-old Daniel Jones, of Park Avenue, Bush Hill Park, have entered guilty pleas to a charge of conspiracy to burgle Hatton Garden Safe Deposit, together with John Collins, 74, of Islington, north London, and 76-year-old Brian Reader, from Dartford, Kent. They will be sentenced at a later date.

Four other defendants from Enfield are due to face trial next June. Brenn Walters, 43, of Manor Court, and Terri Robinson, 35, of Sterling Road, are charged with concealing, transferring or converting criminal property.

Laura Perkins, 40, of Manor Court, and Stephen Robinson, 46, of Sterling Road, face charges of conspiracy to convert or transfer criminal property.

The four are all on bail and are due to appear for a plea and case management hearing in January.

Hospital throws a hen party

SUPERMARKET shoppers became walking works of arts when a hospital's fledgling charity offered customers the chance to be decorated with henna designs.

Chase Farm Hospital Charity, which was officially launched four months ago, set up a stall in Tesco's Lea Valley store, in Glover Drive, on Wednesday last week in a bid to raise its profile.

And as the day coincided with the Hindu festival of Diwali a professional henna artist went along to offer shoppers tattoos. Charity Christmas cards were also sold, raising a total of £62, which will go towards a target of £120,000 to transform two underused spaces at the hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, into therapy gardens for stroke victims and dementia patients.

"The aim of the day was to tell people of the charity's existence, the work we do and the projects we have to improve the hospital," said development officer Alison Kira.

"Stroke patients spend a prolonged period in hospital and a garden sanctuary where they can get away from the wards will help their recovery, plus the more active ones will be able to do a spot of gardening if they so wish," she explained.

The dementia garden is all about engaging patients' memories so we will have, for example, a 1950s' front garden that will evoke memories and a Mediterranean garden that perhaps will trigger memories of a past holiday," she added.

United we stand

Flags flown at half-mast after Paris terror attacks

RELIGIOUS leaders have united in their support for communities following the atrocity in Paris.

The board of trustees of the Muslim Community and Education Centre at Palmers Green Mosque declared: "We stand with vou, Paris.'

In a statement issued after Friday night's attacks the board said: "The cries of the innocents as they went about their daily business ring in our ears and our prayers and thoughts are with them and their families."

They added: "At times like this we see the worst in humanity, but also the best of humanity. We look at the emergency services and those members of the public who quickly moved to help and save their fellow human beings and we should realise that within them is the humanity and love we all aspire to. We pray that they all return safely to their families."

A statement from the board of MCEC, in Oakthorpe Road, said it "falls on all communities to stand firm and united in saying there is no place for extremism or violence in any faith".

The statement added: "Faith is never a reason for violence. "This attack is an attack on mankind. An attack on all of us -Parisians, non-Parisians, Muslims, Christian, Jews, Hindus, Sikhs, people of faith and no faith.

"Our duty is to stand united and send a clear message, 'We will not let the terrorists win by dividing us'."

Minister Alan Combes, of Ponders End Methodist Church, in High Street, said the community was united in prayers after the events in Paris.

The traditional French market is due to return to Enfield Town this week and the community is expected to welcome traders.

The market will be in town between 9am and 6pm tomorrow and on Friday.

Philippe Basset, of Savoir-Fayre, the company behind the market, said that traders had received support at an event on Sunday.

'I am sure that the support in Enfield will be good, too," he said.

The French tricolore is flying at half-mast at Enfield Civic Centre, in Silver Street.

Council leader Doug Taylor said: "We are flying the French flag at half-mast as a mark of solidarity and a demonstration of our support for all those in Paris who were the victims of a series of horrific and sickening terrorist attacks at the weekend.

"Our thoughts are with the friends and families of everyone who was killed or injured at this terrible time and we stand united with our colleagues in our twin town of Courbevoie in northern Paris, Paris, and the whole French nation.'

Sherlock star Martin puts the fun into fundraiser

SHERLOCK actor Martin Freeman helped a hospice raise £76,000 at a charity dinner. The patron of North London Hospice joined 180 other diners at the event at the Royal College of Surgeons in Holborn, central London.

Other guests at the dinner included Radio 2 presenter and actress Lisa Tarbuck, actress Una Stubbs and Dr Who and Sherlock writer and producer Steven Moffat.

Mr Freeman, who is the newest patron of the hospice, which cares for people from Enfield, Barnet and Haringey and has a centre in Barrowell Green, Winchmore Hill, paid tribute to the "fantastic" care offered by nurses. doctors and volunteers.

The star, who plays Watson, alongside Benedict Cumberbatch as Holmes, and also starred as Bilbo Baggins in The Hobbit trilogy, said he wanted to give something back after experiencing the work of the hospice first hand last spring.

He recalled that he had not known what to expect – but "was immediately made to feel welcome, but, more importantly, to made to feel understood and listened to".

"The nurses were fantastic – always there with a shoulder not just for the patient but just as importantly for their families," he said. "My visiting the hospice ended as I guess it always does a few weeks later, but I wanted to keep in some kind of contact, give something back, which is why I am a patron."

Lots on offer included a tour of the Sherlock set, a two-week stay in a holiday home in Texas and a signed rugby shirt.

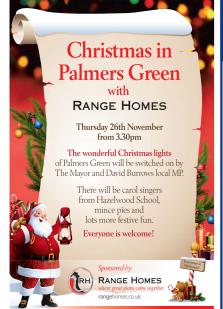

The event also included music from the Caressi String Quartet, the Tiffinians a cappella band and the Jazz Cats. The charity's chief executive Pam McClinton said: "I have been overwhelmed by the generosity and support from every one of our guests. We are thrilled we raised such an incredible amount. This will make a significant difference to families whose lives are turned upside down and need the vital care and support of our hospice service."

The wonder of midwinter at

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

WITH bare-branched trees spiking the view of the distant hills of Hertfordshire, all looks quiet and peaceful in the grounds of Myddelton House.

As the nights draw in and grey clouds and drizzle keep people wrapped up and cosy indoors – surely the gardeners who curate the legacy of galantophile EA Bowles can afford to put their feet up with a cup of tea and take the fallow few months as the year draws to a close to get the ingrained dirt out of their fingernails?

their fingernails?
But far from winding down towards Christmas the gardeners who take care of the extensive gardens, in Bulls Cross, Enfield, are busier than ever.

Head gardener James Hall led us on a tour of the wintering of the garden, proving that despite drizzle and the eerie early sunsets of this time of year, they are full of pockets of beauty.

"With the low sun at this time of year, it is such a different light — and if you leave seed heads and they get a bit of frost on them, they can look quite magical," says James.

But it's not all quiet walks through

But it's not all quiet walks through dream-like winterscapes for James and his team of gardeners at this time of year.

In fact, as we take a stroll, we find gardener Dalia Lauskiene on hands and knees planting tulip bulbs that will explode into colour next spring.

This is no straightforward task.

The gardeners have discovered to their cost that the surrounding wildlife have developed a taste for tulip bulbs.

They have also uncovered a surefire way of protecting their flowers from the marauding squirrels and muntjac deer who like to raid the freshly-dug plots when food becomes a little more scarce in the winter months.

"Chilli flakes," James says simply. "To deter the squirrels once the tulips have been planted, we put chilli flakes down. "It doesn't harm the plants, but it does give the squirrels a nasty shock."

The first big event of the new year will be the snowdrop festival in honour of EA Bowles, who dedicated his life to collecting and cultivating rare snowdrops

But is there much work needed to prepare the gardens ahead of their shooting through the soil in the new year?

"We're doing the last cut of the season on the meadow," explains James. "The snowdrops are close to coming up, so we have to get a last cut of the grass in before they start to come through the soil."

Although this autumn has been mild so far, frosts and chills are expected to come sweeping into the UK towards the end of this week

So what do gardeners at a great estate do to protect their delicate and rare plants.

"Well, all our succulent plants that we had in pots during the summer - we have put into the glasshouse," says James.

"Some of the larger specimens we have wrapped up with fleece and hats to keep them warm and dry.

"Quite often it's not the cold, it's the wet. If something is cold and wet in winter, it rots. If something is cold and dry, it can survive.'

As we walk into the kitchen garden and area around the glasshouse, James points out that it is this time of year when the benefit of the restored glasshouse that was officially opened in 2012 comes into its own.

But here, too, the work for the gardeners is relentless.

"We do get pests in here," adds James. "Gardeners in the Victorian era when this glasshouse was built would have lit a sulphur candle to completely fumigate the place.

"Luckily, we don't have to do that. The smell would be horrendous.

"But what we can do is light a garlic candle, close all the windows and leave the glasshouse sealed overnight. In the morning, hopefully, all the infestations of pests and insects will be gone.

The gardens around Myddelton House are open to the public throughout winter, with the exception of Christmas Day and Boxing Day.

Mayor aims to raise dementia awareness awareness of dementia with a special day devoted to the help and support available to those with the disease and their families and carers.

Patricia Ekechi is using her year-long term of office as the borough's first citizen to raise funds for and highlight and inform residents about dementia.

A "marketplace" of local services, information and advice sharing will be held in the in the conference room at Enfield Civic Centre, in Silver Street, on Saturday, November 28, between 10am and 3pm.

"Dementia is my chosen charity during my year as mayor and I want to do all I can to make people more aware of the various ways it can be managed," said the mayor.

"Although it is a condition which is not curable, those with it can be supported through all the help groups and therapies available at our event and let's hope that medical advances will eventually find a way to cure or even prevent this cruel disease."

To accompany the event, 16 collection boxes will be distributed in the borough – in Enfield Town at Barclays Bank, TSB, Halifax, The George pub and Maani Hair as well as in Fore Street, Edmonton, at NatWest, Big Ben supermarket and chemists.

The boxes are white with the Enfield mayoral crest printed with "Mayor's Charity Appeal 2015/16".

"I am still recruiting more shops and banks to have collection boxes and would greatly appreciate if any other organisations would be willing to

Cult leader denies sex attacks

On trial: Aravindan Balakrishnan denies charges against him

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A MAOIST cult leader raped and imprisoned two of his acolytes over a 30-year period as he built up a rigid commune in which even his daughter was hidden from the world and forced to worship him, a court heard last week.

Aravindan Balakrishnan, 75, of Latymer Road, Edmonton, is charged with four counts of rape, seven counts of indecent assault and three counts of actual bodily harm against two women who had fallen under his "charismatie" spell in south London in the 1970s.

He is also charged with a count of child cruelty and false imprisonment against his own daughter, who was born in the commune, but was never allowed to leave until she finally broke free of her father's power when she was 30 years old and ill with diabetes.

Rosina Cottage QC told the jury at Southwark Crown Court when the case opened on Thursday that Balakrishnan's daughter, who was kept hidden in the home for decades, "barely left the house".

"She was hidden from the outside world and it

"She was hidden from the outside world and it was kept from her apart from as a tool with which to terrify her into subjugation," she said.

"Her freedom of movement was restrained to the extent that even could she have left physically, the power that the defendant exercised over her meant that she could never leave."

The court heard how the girl, who was born in 1983, was kept from school and taught exclusively by other members of the commune.

Miss Cottage said of the girl's life under the defendant's rule: "She lived an isolated and lonely life and buried her head in books that she was allowed to read, in particular The Lord of the Rings trilogy and Harry Potter.

"She was meant to worship the defendant as God, so everything had to be through him. He would say that, 'He is nature and nature is him', so that everything was controlled by him from the sun, the moon, all the winds and the fires. If any of them were to go against them, they would die and even if they were to have a bad thought about him, they would die, fall ill or something bad would befall them. She had to worship him."

The jurors heard that Balakrishnan daughter's movements were so tightly controlled that even as a young child she was only allowed in the garden of the commune's home for one hour a day.

Miss Cottage explained that rather than being brought up by a mother and father, all members of the commune were given equal responsibilities in looking after her as part of Balakrishnan's "communist collective family pilot unit" – and she only learned that Balakrishnan was her father when she finally escaped at the age of 30.

The court heard how Balakrishnan was a "charismatic" leader of a Maoist collective based in Brixton who drew people to his cause of overthrowing what he termed the "British fascist state".

The group set up a commune and Balakrishnan demanded utter devotion from his followers with the group developing into a form of personality cult.

"Slowly and gradually personal freedom of individuals within the collective was eroded," said Miss Cottage.

As Balakrishnan sat in the dock dressed in grey trousers, a blue jacket and listening to the proceedings on a hearing loop, Miss Cottage told jurors of the experience of his victims who fell under his spell as young women.

spell as young women.

She said: "(The victims) were cowed into submission by the defendant's continual debilitating mental and physical violence. They stayed in the collective too frightened to leave and hating to stay.

"They were forced into sexual acts over which they had no choice and were deliberately degrading and humiliating. He seemed to exult in his power over them."

Balakrishnan denies all the charges.

The trial continues and is expected to last for four weeks.

Cloudy2Clear Windows – Service With A Smile!

It's been a crazy few months for Cloudy2Clear Windows. The company which specialises in repairing windows which are steamed up, broken or damaged by replacing the panes – not the frames has grown rapidly as homeowners take advantage of their services.

Managing Director Richard Power feels that it's all about service. 'Our product is simple. If your double glazing is misted up we can replace the glass at a fraction of the cost of a new window, in any type of frame, and with a new 10 year guarantee. But it's not just about saving people money, although that obviously helps.
Many tradespeople have struggled since last year and I honestly feel that during the good times a minority perhaps didn't focus on customer care as much as they should have done.
We make sure we turn up when we say we will, do the job the customer requires and leave their house as clean as a whistle. I often get comments back from customers on how they really didn't expect that sort of service which, in a way, is very sad for the service
industry as a whole.'

Industry as a whole."
Cloudy2Clear service
the Enfield, Edmonton,
Palmers Green, Winchmore
Hill & Southgate areas and Richard is finding that his approach is a major factor in his success. 'The truth is that it's not just the personal satisfaction that I get from doing a good job but also it makes good business sense. I get a huge amount of business from friends and family of people I've done work for, which just goes to show how much a little bit of effort is appreciated."

Thief is caught 'green-handed'

A THIEF was caught "green-handed" after he was sprayed with SmartWater when he broke into a car.

Lokola Lokombe, 48, of Brettenham Road, Edmonton, was sentenced to a drug rehabilitation requirement for six months and ordered to pay £240 in costs at Highbury Corner Magistrates' Court on Wednesday last week

He was also given a month-long curfew order.

Lokombe broke into a vehicle which police had set as a trap for car thieves in Haringey earlier this month.

Lokombe was charged and pleaded guilty to theft from a motor vehicle when he appeared before Highbury magistrates on November 7.

Lokombe was the first person to be arrested as part of the MetTrace programme, in which SmartWater kits are being delivered to 440,000 homes across London over the next three years in a bid to drive down burglaries in the capital.

The kits contain the special traceable liquid which residents can use to mark their possessions – and if those items are then stolen, the SmartWater means that both the items and the thieves can be traced Commander Simon Letchford, who leads the MetTrace programme, said: "The programme is not only protecting residents from thieves, but preventing offences from occurring.

"This thief, who was caught 'greenhanded', is an excellent example of how we are targeting thieves using innovative forensic technology.

Green belt battle taken to council

Thousands sign development protest petition

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

CAMPAIGNERS furious at proposals to build 300 homes on a stretch of green belt land presented a petition with more than 4,000 signatures to council chiefs last week.

They are calling on Enfield Council to rule out any building on land to the south of Enfield Road, on a 20-hectare site on the corner of Cotswold Way, and took their protest to a meeting of the full council in the civic centre, in Silver Street, Enfield Town, on Wednesday.

Their latest move came after housing developer Fairview Homes applied to the council for a scoping opinion study on the feasibility of building 300 homes and a secondary school on the site.

The campaigners also fear that the new consultation on an updated Local Plan is leading to an erosion of the protections green belt land currently enjoys.

Speaking to the Advertiser ahead of the deputation to the council, Maria Turner, one of the residents campaigning against the proposals, said that many of her neighbours believe that the plan to build on the land was pure "financial profiteering" and the housing developer was screening greed for profit behind claims it was behaving altruistically by building a school on the site.

"In an ideal world I would like to see the council being supportive of residents and I would like them to look at the bigger picture," she said. "People move here for the green open spaces. I moved here from Islington precisely because of the fresh air and space.

"Our petition shows that there is a sizable percentage of people who are very opposed to the idea of losing this unique part of the borough." John Austin, Enfield's assistant director for John Austin, Enfield's assistant director for governance and democracy, told councillors and members of the public that although Fairview Homes had not yet submitted a planning application it was likely it would happen in the near future.

Presenting the petition to the council, chairman of the Enfield Roadwatch group Ian de Souza said: "We should not be expected to make sacrifices for the profit of private development companies.

"The four-star reputation of this council will be based on how you manage Enfield's assets. You must take heed of the thousands of people who signed this petition. You must protect all Enfield's green belt land for the benefit of our children and for future generations."

After the petition was delivered, the Conservative group tabled opposition priority business calling on the council to ringfence the green belt.

Edward Smith, Tory housing spokesman, said: "We suspect that the council is gearing up to relax their controls on the green belt. A rational debate is not helped by the alarmist figures given by Alan Sitkin [cabinet member for economic regeneration and business development] two weeks ago. We don't need to build 50,000 homes in Enfield over the next two decades."

Mr Smith added, that according to the latest requirements from the Greater London Authority, the borough was required to build only 16,000 over the next 20 years and that, according to statute, local authorities could not remove land from the green belt because it was expedient for them to do that and that circumstances should be truly exceptional to justify building on that land.

Responding to the demands from the Tory group, the leader of the council Doug Taylor warned against using brownfield sites as a solution to meeting housing demand.

"Let us not be seduced by the idea that there is brownfield solution to this problem," he said. "You can knock down my street, double the size of it and that might be the way – but that comes at a price.

"În upper Edmonton, for example, there was one and a half hectares of a brownfield site which would have provided 120 properties, but residents wanted a green space and so that area is now Angel Gardens. To have developed that brownfield site would have denied those residents green space. This is not a win-win opportunity."

The Tory group moved for a vote on seven recommendations contained in the opposition business. Motions to publish a list of brownfield sites, deliver a timeframe for selling Sloeman's Farm, in Whitewebbs Road, Enfield, to the private sector, provide a development plan for the mansion house in Trent Park and back calls to tighten green belt regulations were defeated by 34 votes to 24.

Columnist Chickenshed Theatre

■ HIS is probably the most exciting time of the year for Chickenshed. Over the weekend we had the last of our technical rehearsals and it is now only a week before the first performance of our Christmas show, The Twelve Days of Christmas. This year we have taken the traditional and well-loved song to create a rollicking, magical Christmas adventure with lots of laughs along the way.

The storyline tells of four brave children as they flee their mean step-family to follow a mysterious partridge on a quest for five gold rings. Aided and abetted by three very strange French hens with rather dubious accents, they encounter an array of larger than life characters including a gaggle of paranoid geese and some rather pompous lords, who are constantly leaping around the stage.

If you have children under the age of six years and feel that they might not want to sit through a full show, throughout December we will also be performing Christmas Tales, an hour-long show delivered by the creators of Tales from the Shed. Shows will be at Chickenshed and the Dugdale Centre, in Enfield Town.

Throughout this time our bar/restaurant will be serving its delicious home-made Mediterranean menu together with some new traditional festive treats at extremely reasonable prices - and in a matter of days our tree and decorations will be up completing the magical experience of Christmas at Chickenshed.

We aren't anti-cycling, but scheme is flawed

THERE has been much correspondence on your letters pages in recent weeks about the council's proposals for cycling in the borough. I thought I should make the Conservative group's position on these proposals.

The schemes for Enfield Town, the A105 (London Road to Palmers Green) and Southbury Road have all been designed by Enfield Council, and approved for consultation by the Labour cabinet member for environment, initially Councillor Chris Bond and then his successor Councillor Daniel Anderson.

Transport for London's Andrew Gilligan has supported the schemes, but has always said that they would only go ahead with clear public support. The total spend allocated for the schemes is a whopping £42million.

In my August 27 column in the Advertiser, I made it very clear that the Conservative group did not support the schemes as presently designed principally because we believe they will if implemented inflict significant harm on the high streets and town centres affected, will create unnecessary traffic congestion and reduce further

I emphasised in my article and repeat now that we are not against additional cycling provision, but this should be created away from the high streets, with minimal inconvenience to residents and motorists alike, and at proportionate cost.

It has been said by Mr Anderson that these proposals are agreed by both political parties. This is most certainly not the case. While it's true that my predecessor as group leader signed a joint bid for funding, that was only would produce schemes that commanded clear majority public support.

When the actual proposals emerged after the 2014 council elections, we were opposed to them and to the consultation structure set up by Labour excluding residents' associations from the so-called "partnership boards"

Two things are now manifestly plain:

1) The consultation exercise was neither as widespread nor as accessible as it should have been for such vast expenditure and the significant impact the proposals will have on residents and motorists alike, something we have repeatedly complained about but to no avail.

2) There are a number of identified flaws in the consultation documents and process, but notwithstanding that, the public opposition to the proposals is very clear and on a significant scale.

In those circumstances the Conservative group opposes these schemes, but not cycling provision on a proportionate scale.

Terry Neville Conservative Group Leader Enfield Council

How many will even use it?

IN all the hoo-ha about the proposed Enfield cycle lanes, and the arguments for and against, I don't recall ever seeing any evidence of research into the actual numbers of cyclists predicted to use the new facility.

If there are predicted numbers - and year - I'd like to know what they are and the methodology applied in collecting them.

This will put matters into perspective by showing just how many (or how few) cyclists will benefit from the considerable upheaval and expense of implementing the scheme.

If there has been no such research, then it seems to me that the council is being rash (not to say irresponsible) with money that might be better spent elsewhere.

Garry Humphreys Park Avenue, Palmers Green

Ask the right questions...

SO Cycle Enfield will be foisted on Enfield because the consultation said a majority wanted it - exactly the result the planners intended all along anyway.

The consultation paper posed slanted questions to which a negative response would be virtually impossible, eg "Would you like wider pavements?" of course we would - and "Would you like more trees?" - yes, please.

An honest questionnaire would have asked things like "Would you like to see Enfield gridlocked permanently?" a) Yes b) No c) Not Sure d) Sounds excellent to me; "Are you happy to be at risk when you get off a bus and step into a cycle lane?" a) Yes b) No c) Not sure d) I'll fend them off with my shopping trolley and finally "When this proposed two-wheeled utopia fails, will the intransigent instigators who imposed the problem undertake to put our roads and our town back as before and at their cost?" a) Most certainly – no problem. We're surprised you asked b) Dream on.

Christine Williams Private Road, Enfield

A victory for the Philistines

I AM lifelong library user and avid reader and was expecting big things for the reopening of Palmers Green Library.

However, on a recent visit, I was dumbfounded at the travesty of what has been done to a once-great institution. The philistines have had a field day.

Not long ago, this was a reader's library, well stocked with a wide range of books. This has been replaced with rows of chick lit and dumb thrillers.

The entire book section has been shunted to the side of the room and books downgraded. Non-fiction has been melded with student study space and does not allow easy access to book

So I rally to Michael Hardyman's call, "Wake up and fight for our libraries and museums", Advertiser, October 28).

Dismay is fine, but action is urgent to fight council cuts. After all, council tax bills are astronomical. The least we can expect is a decent library service.

Robert Dyson Conway Road,

Don't drop off the register

THE government has ignored the advice of the independent Electoral Commission and from December 1 415,000 people could drop off the electoral register in London because of changes to the way we register to vote. That is in addition to the 1.2 million people who are not even registered.

If you are not on the register, or you are worried that you might drop off, then look at the www.gov.uk/registerto-vote website. It only takes three minutes to register.

If you are not on the register, then your views will not be heard. In addition, if you are not registered to vote, you might find it hard to get credit or a loan.

I would encourage as many people to register to vote by November 20 to beat the December drop-off deadline.

Borough's 'low-pay problem'

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

NEARLY a third of workers in Enfield were earning less than the London Living Wage last year, according to new research which ranks the borough as one of the worst in the capital for overcoming poverty and inequality.

Research by the New Policy Unit found that Enfield remained in the bottom eight worst performing London boroughs when measured against unemployment, low pay, education, tax credit claims and one of the report's authors, Hannah Aldridge, said Enfield has a "particular problem with low pay".

In 2013 to 2014, 30 per cent of all jobs in Enfield were paying less than the London Living Wage of £9 15 an hour

Ms Aldridge said: "The high prevalence of low pay in Enfield has wider implications.

Struggle: The New Policy Unit research found that people are finding it hard to afford housing in the borough of Enfield

"Most notably, 28 per cent of young people live in families who claim tax credits. Planned cuts to tax credits in April 2016 are likely to affect a large proportion of these families."

However, unemployment at 6.3

per cent is lower than the London average of 6.4 per cent.

The research institute, which looks into social and economic issues, also found that people struggle to afford homes in Enfield.

Researchers found that on average the cheapest two-bedroom property costs £1,100, or 70 per cent of the monthly gross earnings for the lowest paid quarter of earners in Enfield.

The report, which was funded by the Trust for London charitable foundation, called for policymakers to put affordable housing higher up on the agenda.

Enfield also had high numbers of evictions – 25 per 1,000 people. Across London last year there were 27,000 evictions, said the institute. Ms Aldridge said: "Housing affordability is a significant problem.

"The combination of low pay and high rents is a real challenge for many of Enfield's residents."

She added: "The trends in poverty in Enfield mirror the wider patterns of change across the capital, with poverty hotspots moving from inner to outer London areas

"Policymakers need to understand these changes so they can tackle the problems they are leading to."

Golden wonders: Woodcroft Wildspace volunteers Bob Ladell, Amanda Ladell, Fiona Fall, Audrey Kirby and Sonia Allard

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A PATCH of wilderness in Winchmore Hill has been lauded by the Enfield in Bloom committee for the second year in a row.

Woodcroft Wildspace, in Woodland Way, has been presented with the gold award for the best environmental garden or meadow.

Bob Ladell, chairman of the committee that runs Woodcroft, said that winning the award for the second year running proved that the work of all the volunteers on the site had paid off.

"We are absolutely delighted," he said. "We are very grateful to the Enfield in Bloom team for judging in our favour. "We knew we had won the award, but the act award ceremony was last week and having won this provided us with extra motivation." Bob added that the award was a good note to end the year on as he has big plans for 2016.

The committee wants to organise a series of fundraising events in the dedicated community meadow on the site, which Bob feels is ideal for events including school plays and concerts as it acts as a natural amphitheatre.

He is also urging school groups interested in visiting the site as part of their studies to get in touch as their dedicated education slots for next year are filling up fast.

He said: "During the course of 2015, we have hosted some 20 school visits ranging from four-year-olds through to ten and 11-year-olds.

"Everyone, including the teaching staff, have thoroughly enjoyed the hands-on experience."

Anyone interested in getting in touch with the award-winning gardeners can email enquiries@ woodcroft.org.uk – or to book a school, visit education@woodcroft.org.uk

Borough now home to fewer smokers

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

THERE are more than 5,000 fewer smokers in Enfield than there were two years ago, according to latest figures from Public Health England.

There has been an unprecedented increase in the number of smokers packing it in since 2013.

The majority choose to give up because of the health risk and also because they can no longer afford to smoke.

longer afford to smoke.

About 400 people die as a result of smoking in the borough each year and for every person who dies there are 21 people with smoking-related illnesses.

"The reduction is testament to the work of many people in the borough to improve the health of everyone," said Nneka Keazor, Enfield Council's cabinet member for public health and sport.

"Smoking is the greatest cause of death and disease among residents and the fewer people who smoke the healthier our borough will be."

The figures support earlier data showing Enfield has the lowest rate of 15-year-olds smoking in the country and

Calling it quits: There are 5,000 fewer smokers in the borough of Enfield than there were two years ago indicates smoking is becoming less and less acceptable throughout the borough.

Ms Keazor added: "There is only one message about smoking and that is not to start or, if you do smoke, to stop.

"The council's recent work in asking people not to smoke outside school gates emphasised that smoking in front of children gives them completely the wrong message but also that smoking ruins your health as well as your finances and looks."

We have ruled nothing out, insists council's cycling supremo

THE council chief with responsibility for delivering the multi-million-pound Cycle Enfield scheme to the borough has insisted he has ruled nothing out from the Southbury Road consultation phase.

Speaking to the Advertiser as the consultation on proposed changes to Southbury Road, in Enfield, enters its final weeks, Daniel Anderson, Enfield Council's cabinet member for environment, insisted that nothing is set in stone over plans to remove on street-parking in Southbury Road and remove the north-turning slip road from Southbury Road on to Great Cambridge Road.

Asked if he would consider changing the route from the heavily congested and densely populated Southbury Road to relatively wider parallel streets, such as Carterhatch Lane or Bullsmoor Lane, both to the north of Southbury Road, he said: "At this stage nothing has been ruled out.

"For any changes to be made they have to be safe. The whole idea of the cycle scheme is to ensure we have safe passages for cyclists.

Road is part of that process of finding the safest option for everyone including drivers."

His emphasis on the fluid nature of the consultation process comes as Tory Chase ward councillor Nick Dines launched an attack on the plans for Southbury Road.

He asked council officers if removing the slip roads from Southbury Road on to Great Cambridge Road will mean that the length of time the lights will be green will be considerably reduced.

He was told in a letter from officers: "For the left-turn slip roads on to the A10 we proposed to reduce green time. Average queue lengths are predicted to increase by up to four passenger car units in both directions."

Mr Dines said: "Despite the plans for Green Lanes and Enfield Town getting the most attention it appears that certain aspects of the Southbury Road

'Not set in stone': Enfield councillor Daniel Anderson plan are even more ridiculous. I urge everyone living on or near to Southbury Road to make their views clear before the consulta-tion ends on December 18."

Next consultation process gets under way this week

THE latest consultation on the Cycle Enfield proposals are due to be launched later this week.

No details of the proposals are available to view online yet. How-ever, the plans will go live on the council's website on Friday.

Businesses that might be affected by the plans can view displays of the proposals tomorrow at Edmonton Green library, in Edmonton Green shopping centre. Residents and other interested parties can also view the plans tomorrow and on Friday.

The public exhibition will follow the same format as the other exhibitions for the consultation process for the Green Lanes, Enfield Town and Southbury Road sections of the scheme with council officers and Transport for London experts on hand to answer concerns and questions.

The consultation process will

The councillor heading up the scheme, Daniel Anderson, cabinet member for environment, said: "Cycle Enfield isn't just about cycling. At its heart it is an opportunity to redesign some of our high streets and town centres, making them more accessible, pleasant places to visit, places where people will want to visit more often and stay longer. "In addition, cycling can play a key role in addressing the borough's poor air quality and is a great way for people of all ages to stay fit and keep healthy.

"We know that not enough people cycle in this borough and we want to encourage more people to use their bikes, but this is also a great opportunity for us to revolutionise our town centres so that they are more accessible for everyone. We, therefore, want to hear the public's ideas to help us on this progress so it is not wasted.

There are too many young adults still living in their childhood bedrooms trapped by London's escalating house prices. Families spending more time commuting than they do with each other. Too many lives brought short by pollution in our air.

The stakes at the mayoral election could not be higher. I am asking for your vote because London needs a Mayor with plans that can be delivered and who can work with the Government to fund them; for someone who will put Londoners ahead of party or union interest, and to build a better city that works for all Londoners.

Charity chief jailed

over £91,000 fraud

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

A CHILDREN'S charity founder who stole between £91,000 and £137,000 from its funds to support her lifestyle has been jailed for 18 months.

Jeanette Rose Stylianou set up the Children and Parents Advisory Group in the 1990s, offering weekend, summer and after-school activities for youngsters with special needs.

The charity received funding from Enfield Council and was based at Oaktree School, in Chase Side, Southgate.

However, a co-signatory spotted discrepancies in the charity's books while preparing end-of-year accounts for 2010-11.

During the investigation, Stylianou submitted carrier bags containing torn-up cheques with forged signatures of the co-signatory, along with blank cheque stubs and receipts which had been put through the charity's accounts.

Receipts were also discovered for three plasma televisions, which were believed to be for Stylianou's personal use, an alarm system, which was installed at her house, and a receipt for a birthday meal at a London restaurant.

Stylianou, whose address was given as Windsor Court, in Chilton, County Durham, was asked to resign as chairwoman of the charity – a post she had held for 15 years.

A three-year police investigation found that the 57-year-old had abused her position over several years, forging her co-signatory's signature on charity cheques.

She paid more than £91,000 into her personal account and cashed some cheques for personal use, police said. It is believed that the total amount of money stolen was between £91,000 and £137,000.

Stylianou pleaded guilty to fraud between April 23, 2007, and November 6, 2010, at Wood Green Crown Court in July and was sentenced to 18 months in jail on November 6. She was also ordered to pay £10,000 compensation within six months.

Detective Constable Keith Kimberley said: "Stylianou held a position of trust and responsi-bility within the charity set up to provide much-needed respite and relief for both families and children dealing with disabilities, but she broke that trust when she used the charity's money to fund her personal lifestyle."

At the Alice Nursery we pride ourselves on offering a first-rate pre-prep experience, led by our Nursery Manager (a fully trained and experienced teacher) and her specialist Early Years Trained staff. Girls flourish in an atmosphere of calm excitement and purposeful engagement as they discover the world around them through a variety of carefully planned activities linked to a weekly theme. As soon as they are ready to begin to read they are encouraged to do so, being taught by fully-trained staff with a working knowledge of education beyond Nursery.

The girls have experienced a host of funfilled trips and events that have kept them busy throughout this academic year. Annual highlights included the Nursery Nativity, Sports Day, trip to Willows Farm and Paradise Wildlife Park, and visits from Uncle Vic and his 'mini beasts' and Edmonton Fire Brigade.

Girls may join after their third birthday and families are welcome to visit during our regular Wednesday Open Mornings. Campaigner puts out warning over library volunteers

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A CAMPAIGNER has issued a stark warning over the council's plan to up the numbers of volunteers in the borough's libraries.

Susan Chinn, chairwoman of Highgate Library Action Group and one of the founding members of the Libraries for Life for Londoners group, was instrumental in the grassroots campaign which saw Haringey Council retain all its libraries.

While Highgate Library does use volunteers, she told the Advertiser that many of them are former employees, who feel responsible for keeping the facility alive.

"Volunteers need extensive training before they can do anything and even then they can only really do things like shelve books and act as greeters," she explained.

"But these greeters patently do not work. They are supposed to welcome people who come in and direct them, but they found that people do not like approaching people, so it was a total failure.

"On top of that, volunteers need so much training and help that it actually stops librarians from doing their important work, like working on displays, finding out what the library needs and checking on the latest publications. "Really, volunteers can restock shelves and that's about it."

Ms Chinn added that libraries needed properly trained staff now more than ever before as, with cutbacks in every other area, older people, disabled people, young people and children would come to rely on libraries as a place of sanctuary.

"When you look at how tiny the percentage of budget is that is spent on libraries and the value of the work of librarians, in helping young people access quiet study areas, helping unemployed people search for work on the internet, running toddler sessions and study sessions for teenagers – it is an invaluable resource in times of economic hardship and local authorities are mad to try and cut corners in providing this service," she said.

However, Enfield Council's cabinet member in charge of libraries, Ayfer Orhan, insisted that residents could reap rewards from volunteering.

She said: "We want to harness the energy and enthusiasm that Enfield people undoubtedly have for their libraries and we can offer a number of opportunities to those who are interested in volunteering."

Details on open days for people interested in volunteering are taking place throughout November and more information can be found on www.enfield.gov.uk

The Future of Broomfield House and Park Public Consultation September –

November 2015

We are working with The Broomfield House Trust, to look at options for the future of Broomfield House and stable block. We have commissioned a report from independent architects to explore possible options. Broomfield House and its stable block are buildings of architectural and historic interest, listed by Historic England at Grade II*. The house was badly damaged by a series of fires and would cost approximately £6million to fully restore. The stable block is also now in need of repair. Both buildings need a viable use.

We would be grateful if you could take a few minutes to share your view on its future. Please visit www.enfield.gov.uk/broomfield_consultation.

Your feedback will help inform our on-going project as we look to decide on the future of Broomfield House.

Service pays tribute to Arctic convoy veterans

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

A SPECIAL service marking the 70th anniversary of the ending of the Arctic convoys took on an extra poignancy as the congregation prayed for those caught up in the Paris massacre.

Dignitaries from Russia

attended the service, which paid tribute to the service personnel who embarked on the perilous voyages to deliver essential aid and equipment during World War II.

A plaque marking the anniversary was unveiled outside Enfield Civic Centre, in Silver Street.

Wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill described the convoys, which ran from journey in the world". They risked attack from German submarines, warships and aerial bombing, which destroyed 85 merchants ships and 16 naval vessels.

The vessels carried a range of goods including food, blankets, medical supplies and weapons to the Red Army troops who were fighting the Nazis on the eastern front.

Equipment from the UK, USA and Canada was transported via Iceland to northern ports in Russia.

Most of the convoys delivered goods to the ports of Arkhangelsk and Murmansk.

On Sunday, Russian naval ttache Captain Oleg attache Kornienko joined Lieutenant making speeches.

Deputy Lieutenant Enfield Ann Cable led the laying of wreaths at a granite plaque which was erected outside the civic centre in 2003.

The late Stanley Carte, a veteran and Enfield mayor, had been instrumental in getting the plaque put up in Silver Street.

That memorial was presented to the people of Enfield by surviving Arctic convoy veterans.

The last post was sounded during the service and the congregation marked two minutes' silence as the Reverend Dr Steve Griffiths, the vicar of St Andrew's Church, in Enfield Town, led the prayers to remember those caught up in Commander Mark van der Bergh, of the Royal Navy, in making speeches. the Paris atrocity as well as those who served in the convoys. The service was also attended by members of the Royal British Legion and cadet forces in Enfield.

Afterwards veterans and dignitaries were treated to music and traditional karavais, Russian bread cakes, from the Eastern European Centre, in Friern Barnet Road, New Southgate.

X marks the spot for young voters

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

YOUNG people across Enfield are going to the polls to elect representatives to the borough's youth parliament.

The polls are open to more than 9,000 voters aged between 11 and 19 and also those aged up to the 25 with special educational needs and voting started on Monday.

Across Enfield there are places for 18 members of the youth parliament, plus 18 deputies.

Elections are held for the youth parliament every two years. Voters have a choice of 50 candidates fielded by schools, colleges and youth centres across the borough.

Once elected, members will set out their agenda for their work programme during the term of the parliament.

They will also select a leader and representatives to the UK National Youth Parliament.

Voters go to the polls over ten days until Thursday, November 26. At Broomfield School, in Wilmer Way, Southgate, four candidates have been preparing their election statements Fifteen-year-old Kaycie Catwell said the qualities of a good candidate should be demonstrated, rather than simply stated. She explained: "If I was elected, my aim would

Results of the election will be declared at St Anne's Lower School, in London Road, Enfield Town, on Friday, November 27.

Enfield Council's cabinet member for education, children's services and protection Ayfer

Orhan will serve as the returning officer. She said: "Through the Enfield Youth Parliament young people have a voice to be heard through their representatives."

She urged voters to read the candidates' statements and consider who they thought would act well on their behalf.

Ms Orhan said the previous youth parliament had taken part in the council's overview and scrutiny decisions and influenced last year's budget consultations.

What's on and what's coming

Ab-solutely fabulous...

By Russ Lawrence

FOUR decades have elapsed since little known Swedish pop group Abba swept to superstardom with their Eurovision winning entry Waterloo, yet they remain as popular as ever thanks to the countless number of smash hits they produced.

All their memorable chart-topping songs will be performed at Wyllyotts Theatre, in Potters Bar, next Friday (November 27) when Waterloo - the Best of Abba Tribute Show comes to the Darkes Lane venue on the latest leg of its UK tour.

The show looks back at the sensational rise to stardom of Agnetha, Bjorn, Benny and Anni-Frid and gives fans the opportunity to experience the thrill of a live Abba show.

Although the group broke up in 1982, their music has enjoyed a fresh burst of popularity through various films, with their hits being developed into the stage musical Mamma Mia, which later spawned a blockbuster movie.

They have sold more than 380 million albums and singles worldwide making them the second best selling music group of all time.

James Baker, director-producer of the tribute, said recreating Abba's music for a live show was a challenge.

BUYER ONLINE INTEREST TO SOAR OVER CHRISTMAS PERIOD

haart estate agents in Southgate are urging sellers to put their homes on the market before Christmas to take advantage of a spike in buyers searching online for properties over the festive period.

After ripping open presents and indulging in the usual Christmas festivities, statistics from property portal Rightmove show that their website's property pages receive a huge online spike in viewings.

Last year, it received 1m total page visits on Christmas Day, which rose to 2.2m on New Year's Day and 2.8m on the first working day of the year.

Rolanda Politakis Branch Manager at Southgate said: "Traditionally, just before Christmas is a quiet time because most people are focused on the forthcoming festivities.

"But the statistics from this property portal prove that buyers tend to have time on their hands once those festivities are over and are looking for a fresh start and their next move. So it is worth putting your home on the market to take advantage of this interest."

haart is part of the UK's largest independent estate agency and has over 130 branches across the country.

Properties to let with haart can now be viewed on the new OnTheMarket.com property portal, as well as through Rightmove and haart.co.uk.

For further information about listing your property with haart and OnTheMarket.com or finding your perfect home, please call 020 8886 4444 from 8am to 10pm every day – or visit your local branch.

The Twelve Days of Christmas

Let there be

S DUSK falls the streets of Enfield will be lit up in a festival of light which helps get the festive season off to a glowing start.

This is the fifth year of the Enfield Christmas Parade of Lights has been held in the town centre after Tony Corrigan and Kathy Worrall came up with the idea to get local community groups together to showcase their talents and help raise thousands of pounds for local charities.

More than 300 people will be taking part in this year's parade which starts from Silver Street at 4pm on Sunday November 29.

It heads along Baker Street, into Lancaster Road before turning into Chase Side at about 4.45pm, arriving in Church Street at about 5.15pm and finishing at Portcullis Lodge Car Park at 5.30pm.

parade and the North London Brass Band will lead community singing at the George pub at The Town with pupils from St Anne's Catholic High School for Girls from Oakthorpe Road in Palmers Green and Enfield Community Choir.

There will also be entertainment from the Millfield, Dugdale and Intimate Theatre groups who will parade through the streets on floats to showcase their future produc-

Enfield Blaze Cheerleaders and dance groups Suella, Starz Kids and Ministry of Expression will dance around the parade

The 2nd Enfield Brownies are performing their version of the hit movie Frozen and Edmonton Rotary Club will wow the crowds with their snowman themed float.

Pupils from the Aylward Academy in Windmill Road in Edmonton have taken the theme of carnival and Artstart will give people a sneak preview of their float for the New Year's Day Parade.

The Unity 70 group for people with leaning difficulties have hinted that tutus will appear Museum will also be on display, including a trailer driven by Mr Tractor Man and Enfield Cycling Club and Enfield Cycling Campaign will also be involved.

The Enfield Scout Band will led this year's Vehicles from the Whitewebbs Motor Shops and businesses will also be getting into the festive spirit.

An early start to the festive season

A FESTIVE SCENE straight off a Christmas card will be created in Enfield when the town is transformed complete with ice rink and snow from a snow machine.

The Winter Wonderland will take shape at Chase Green Park on Chase Green Avenue for families to enjoy a festive day out in the run up to Christmas.

The event has been arranged by The Nightingale Cancer Support Centre to raise awareness in the community of their services

The centre's fundraising manager Lesa Barker said: "We did a Christmas event last year at the library green and it was well attended.

"We decided to go bigger and better this year. It's about raising awareness and getting our name out there."

Attractions include Santa's Grotto, provided by Edmonton Rotary Club, and a range of stalls offering winter specialities including crepes, waffles, doughnuts and German sausages.

Intrepid skaters can hire their skating shoes to enjoy a 30 minute skating session on the 12m by 12m

Places on the ice are limited and advance booking is advisable.

There is also a fun fair packed with traditional rides and games to keep visitors busy as they wait their time on the ice.

Enfield choirs the Capel Players, Sing Out and the Lynmore Singers will be entertaining the crowds during the two day event.

Children can also meet a range of animals including guinea pigs, mice, ferrets and goats at the animal kingdom stall.

The event runs from 12 noon to 8pm on Saturday November 28 and from 10am to 6pm on Sunday November 29 from 10am to Visit www.nightingale support.org.uk or call 020 8 366 9674 to book a time on the ice rink.

Whilst admission to the Winter Wonderland is free ice skating costs £12.50 for adults and the over 12s, £10 for children.

Family tickets for two adults and three children cost £48.

Skating times are inclusive of a 15 minute preparation time and a 30 minute skating session.

Santa is coming to Phoenix Rose!

ONLY 3 DAYS

But we need your help!!!

Santa is flying all the way from Lapland in his helicopter at I I am on Saturday 21st November to see all the good boys and girls in the area.

However, he is not sure where he needs to land so we don't want him to get lost. We need as many good boys and girls to be here and wave and cheer so Santa knows exactly where to land. He will then spend time in his Grotto where you can tell him how good you have been and what you are hoping to get for Christmas.

Don't forget, we are looking for GOOD boys and girls only! If you would like more information on Santa and his grotto please email: info@phoenix-rose.com

The Twelve Days of Christmas

No time to waste in your quest for toys

HRISTMAS is round the cor- THE HOT THREE ner, and children are already dictating their Christmas lists.

But as the DreamToys list of the predicted bestselling toys for Christmas is published, toy retailers have warned parents they may need to act fast to make sure their children get the toys they're dreaming of on the

This year's DreamToys list, which is compiled by a Toy Retailers Association panel of leading UK toy sellers including Argos, Smyths Toys, The Entertainer and Toys R US, is dominated by old favourites including Star Wars, Lego, and Thunderbirds, but also features a host of interactive and unique items such as a Meccano Robot, a sing-along Care Bear, and a 3D art studio.

"This range embraces all that is good about toys and how important toys are to a child's development," says Gary Grant, chair of the Dream-Toys committee. "As a grandparent and a father, some of the toys in the list take me back to my childhood.

I've been selling Star Wars now for 35 years, and I sat and watched Thunderbirds as a child – there's a lot of nostalgia in this list, but there's also a lot of new things."

However, some of the new things are absolutely flying off the shelves, and Mr Grant warns that three items in particular in the Top 12 could be in short supply before Christmas.

■ Pie Face

A game involving something messy like whipped cream or a wet sponge being thrown at competitors faces at the click of a dial.

"As fast as we get stock in the shops, it's selling out almost instantly. I think it's because it's just good fun," savs Mr Grant.

"We're selling as many of these games to grown-ups as we are to items are "absolute dead certs" for

■ Paw Patrol Paw Patroller

Paw Patrol features a range of vehicles and characters that Mr Grant says have been selling "outstandingly well" all year.

The Paw Patroller, which is aimed at pre-school children, is a miniature dog rescue vehicle, based on the popular animated children's TV

"If Paw Patrol across the whole range, not just the item in the top 12, is on your child's Christmas list, I wouldn't be leaving it late to buy it," advises Grant.

"If you see it, buy it and put it away.

■ IDO3D Deluxe 3D Design Studio

A 3D art set featuring 3D templates, special pens and a UV light to help kids create multicoloured 3D master-

"It's really caught everybody by surprise and as fast as it's hitting the shelves, it's selling," says Mr Grant. "I think the industry will have underestimated the volume of IDO3D studios needed this Christmas."

BEST OF THE REST

While Mr Grant says those three selling well before Christmas, he points out: "That isn't to say that the Millennium Falcon from Star Wars or the biggest, best and most interactive lightsaber that I've ever sold in 35 years, or Thunderbirds Tracy Island, are going to be any less in demand.

'But at the moment, from what we've seen, there's fair stocks avail-warns that demand for Lego.

Mr Grant also

whose sales rose 17per cent last year and are thought to be up 15per cent this year, is much higher than avail-

"Lego is absolutely flying in the shops at the moment. And on top of that you've got Star Wars, which is going to increase Lego sales as well.

"Availability is going to be challenging, and if I was a parent with a known Lego set in mind for Christmas, I wouldn't leave that purchase

"Its popularity is outstanding, and is testament to a high-quality toy that delivers what's on the box.

You never speak to a child that's disappointed with their Lego set - it's got all the elements of things you'd want a child to do to develop as a creative person: imagination, creativity, instruction-following. It's a box of fun learning.'

Mr Grant points out that the importance of toys at all times of the year cannot be underestimated, and stresses: "Sometimes we think of toys as frivolous, when actually it's how children learn.

There's far more growth and knowledge gained when a child plays with a toy than there is when they play with a computer game.'

The Twelve Days of Christmas

O matter how many chef, Pierre Rebuzzi. pigs in blankets you've scoffed on Christmas Day, you can always make room for some pudding, can't you? The Japanese say we have a separate stomach ("betsubara") for dessert, and it's never more true than on December 25.

In recent years, shops have \blacksquare KEEP IT LIGHT battled to outdo one another to produce the most tempting Christmas pud on the planet – and it might seem much easier to pop one in your shopping basket than to make your own. But old traditions die hard, and in the next few months, the heady scent of spice and sugar will be wafting around the nation's kitchens, as we get cooking our own.

Being a keen baker but a total novice when it comes to all festive fayre, I thought it was about time I rolled up my sleeves - and enrolled on a Christmas pudding masterclass at The Landmark London in Marvlebone.

"The traditional time to make Christmas pudding is the 5th Sunday before Christmas -Stir-up Sunday [November 22, the last Sunday before advent] - but you can make them any time," says pastry

For many years, Rebuzzi, who hails from Lyon, the food capital of France, has made around 500 Christmas puddings to serve at the hotel, so who better to take me through my paces to make my very first Christmas pud?

traditionally English dish by a Frenchman, but it turns out that Rebuzzi has a unique take on the old classic.

Rebuzzi uses just one which I do at home, is to steam spice - nutmeg - to flavour his pudding, although cinnamon, cloves and ginger are traditionally used too.

■ MIX IT UP

It turns out that the Christmas pudding itself is quite quick and easy to make - but there are a whopping 22 different ingredients in Rebuzzi's version, which have all been 'prepared earlier', including the fruit that's been steeping for weeks.

All I need to do is mix them all up in the bowl, and grate the tart Granny Smith apple in too!

ally a very basic mix to make, you just have to incorporate your dry items with your wet items, your nuts, your fruits, and mix everything properly," says Rebuzzi, warning me to "be very careful not to have patches of flour".

And now that blessing can be bestowed on any cheese lover in the north London area.

Cheesemaker Keith Sides told this paper that budding fromageres can make a cheese in one of their workshops and bring it home to let it mature to its full potential at home, or even rustle up a quick mozzarella plait to impress Christmas party guests, and really, who amongst us is not impressed by a mozzarella plait?

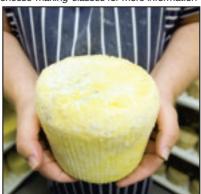

As well as the day-long workshops the company also run shorter evening classes for people who just want a short, intense, burst of cheesy goodness.

Tantalisingly Wildes Cheeses also offer bespoke courses and classes - so for people looking to organise a stag or hen party with a difference they need look no further

"We don't just do classes though for cheeselovers," Keith insists. "We also do a range of hampers that always prove very popular at this time of year as well as individual gift cheeses and cheeses that can be matured at home to whichever level of intensity according to taste.

The Twelve Days of Christmas

Are you hanging up your stocking on the wall?" Not long now Noddy.

It seems to get earlier every year, but Noddy Holder's distinctive cry of 'It's Chriiiiiiistmas' at the beginning of the band's 1973 festive hit Merry Xmas Everybody signals the start of the season - no matter what the John Lewis marketing department and those chancers over at Starbucks with their red cups might try to tell you.

The band, formed in the West Midlands in the late Sixties, are inseparable from the song. It was written by Holder and bandmate Jim Lea, sparked an annual race for Christmas Number 1 and has charted almost every year since it was released. No wonder Holder refers to it as his "pension scheme".

Strip away, if you can, the fact you've heard it hundreds, maybe thousands of times, and underneath, there's a fantastic song. And it's most certainly not the only one in Slade's back catalogue, as a new box set is about to emphatically prove.

When Slade Rocked The World will be released on October 30, and features, among other things - such as a reproduced copy of 1975 book The Slade Story - a two-CD collection of their first four albums.

As well as that, that quartet of glam-tinged rock - Slade Alive!, Slayed?, Old New Borrowed And Blue and Slade In Flame - have been remastered and reissued on heavyweight vinyl.

It's a collector's dream, and will hopefully earn Slade the kind of critical reappraisal they're so overdue. Bands as diverse as Motley Crue, Kiss, Ramones and Sex Pistols cited them as an influence, while it's hard to imagine Oasis sounding like they did without Slade. The Manchester band even covered Cum On Feel The Noize as a B-side.

"I think we're far more respected now than we were at the time," says Holder, 69. "We were incredibly commercially successful, but a lot of people regarded us as a bit of joke.

"We were always on TV as well. A lot of people probably thought that overshadowed the content of the music. We don't have any complaints, though.

Jingle bell rockers...

It's hard not to think a band with as many hits as Slade should be held in slightly higher regard than they are, however.

They had six Number 1 singles in the UK, the same as Queen, Blondie and Rod Stewart, and more than The Police, David Bowie and Bee Gees. Slade also made the Top 20 with 17 consecutive singles.

Combined, Slade spent 211 weeks in the Top 40, while their three Number 1 albums were in the charts for 153 weeks, and on top of that, there were chart toppers in Japan and Australia too.

Holder hasn't heard the four albums being reissued for some time. "I don't think they've dated, they still sound relevant and fresh," he says. "And I'm hearing it as a member of the public will hear it. These records are 45 years old, and I've forgotten a lot of it.

"Where did those 45 years go? I am proud of it, proud of all of it. We were together for 25 years, the four original members; me, Jim, Don [Powell] and Dave, and we were recording for pretty much all of that.

"We had our first hit single in '71 and we had our last in '91, so that was good. We put together a vast catalogue."

Holder left the band in 1992, as did Jim Lea, who didn't want to continue without his old mate. Powell and Hill have continued to perform and record music under the name. Aside from the brief reunions - Chas Chandler's funeral and Holder's episode of This Is Your Life - the band have never reformed and, according to Holder, they never will.

"That's not going to happen," he says, flatly. "We've gone past the stage of reuniting. Too much time has gone by and I can't see the four original members getting back together to play again and tour.

"I had 30 years on the road, that was enough for me. 25 years of those were with the same guys. Little arguments become big arguments, things get silly, and I never wanted to carry on playing for the sake of it, so I won't.

As the band's 50th anniversary approaches, he's happy to listen to their music for the first time in years and let the memories come flooding back.

"It's 50 years since our worlds turned upside down," says Holder. "I've been reminiscing, and there'll likely be more reissues to come. That's more than enough for me."

Slade factfile:

- Slade were Noddy Holder, Jim Lea, Don Powell and Dave Hill
- They were initially called The N'Betweens, and for a short while Ambrose Slade,
- before shortening their name to Slade.
- Holder played music teacher Neville Holder in Seventies-set ITV comedy The Grimleys. alongside Nigel Planer and Amanda Holden.
- Merry Xmas Everybody
- has sold more than a mullion
- The band became famous for deliberate misspellings, with song titles like Look Wot You Dun, Gudbuy T'Jane, Take Me Bak 'Ome, Coz I Luv You and Mama Weer All Crazee Now.

ACCURATE VALUATIONS IN ENEIELD

The main factors that affect the price achieved for your home are likely to be size, location and fittings. However, there are innumerable other variations that can add significant value.

Valuing properties in West Enfield is not like valuing properties elsewhere. There are thousands of different styles and in some roads every other property is quite different to the next. The knowledge to appreciate these differences can only be built up over time.

At lan Gibbs, our valuers have built up that knowledge with over 35 years of valuing properties in the EN1/EN2 area and that experience heightens the chance of you realising the full potential of your greatest financial asset.

For a free, no obligation valuation please call 020 8370 4800

Most people love pets; however when selling a home it is best to arrange to have the dog taken for a short walk or pop the cat out the back door. Some people are uncomfortable with even the cutest animals making them nervous and fearful whilst distracting them from admiring the home you are selling.

DIER'S JOY AT HIS ENGLAND DEBUT

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

ERIC DIER revealed that he fulfilled a boyhood dream by making his senior England debut against Spain on Friday night.

The Tottenham Hotspur midfielder came on as a 63rdminute substitute during England's 2-0 defeat and he admitted that - despite the result he was thrilled to have made it out on to the pitch.

He said: "It's one of the aims you set out to achieve when you start your career so to have achieved it so early is a dream come true and a very proud moment for me and my family.

"Spain are a fantastic team with lots of players that I looked up to growing up, so to watch them play and then come on against them wasn't the easiest way to make a debut, but a good way at the same time. It doesn't get much tougher than Spain and that is what you want to test yourself against both as a team and as an individual.

"It was nice to make my debut coming on at the same time as Dele [Spurs team-mate Alli] and hopefully in the future there will be more games alongside each other.

"It's all happened so quickly, I haven't really had a chance to sit back and think about it all yet. I prefer to just put my head down and keep going. I'll have a lot of time to think about it when I'm retired."

Alli's substitute appearance saw him win his third cap having made his debut against Estonia last month – and the 19-year-old was thrilled to have been given another opportunity to impress at international level.

"It's a great honour for me and obviously I'm delighted to be involved," he said. "I can't get carried away though as I've still got a lot to take on board and this is a great environment for me to go and learn from some of the best players in the country.

"It's not going to be easy, but it's all good experience. I'm still young and I've still got a lot to learn, but whenever I go out on to the pitch I always try to play as well as I can.

"It's a great opportunity, but I know I've got to carry on performing well and keep up the form I've been in recently. I'm really thankful to all the players at Spurs for helping me to perform and also to all the staff and the head coach at the club for selecting me this season."

A dream come true: Eric Dier admitted that he had fulfilled a boyhood ambition by making his England debut on Friday

Five more signings confirmed by Skolars

THE London Skolars have confirmed five more signings as they continue to build their squad ahead of the 2016 rugby league season.

Twins Judd and Michael Greenhalgh, Alex Miles Baker, Adam Roels and Ryan Chester are the latest new faces to be confirmed by the Kingstone Press Championship One outfit as they look to improve following a difficult campaign.

The Greenhalgh twins are products of the Skolars' junior set-up and centre Judd made a number of first-team appearances two years ago before missing the entire 2015 season through injury, while second-row forward Michael broke into the first-team squad this year.

Predominantly a prop, Chester has joined the Skolars from Hemel Stags, while Miles Baker and Roels are both graduates from the strong rugby league programme at Exeter University.

A Skolars spokesman said: "Alex is an outside back who originally hails from Warwickshire and was only introduced to rugby league at 18.

"However, he proved to be a natural and progressed through the university levels to represent South West Students and then Great Britain Pioneers on their trip to north Africa in 2013. Known for his exceptional work-rate and good footwork, he should prove a welcome addition the squad.

"Adam is a back-rower who was part of the same competitive Exeter side that finished strongly in the BUCS competition last year as Alex."

Meanwhile, the Skolars' Louis Robinson is set to appear for Canada as they attempt to qualify for the 2017 rugby league World

The qualifying event is taking place in Jacksonville, Florida, between December 4 and 12 and sees the Canadians taking on the United States and Jamaica.

"I am thrilled to be selected to represent Canada in the upcoming games," said Robinson, who has scored three tries in seven international appearances.

"The possibility to play in a rugby league World Cup is a oncein-a-lifetime event which I would love to help the country achieve. There are so many people behind the scenes who work extremely hard and would deserve this achievement.

I am also extremely thankful to the London Skolars and head coach Jermaine Coleman for being supportive in allowing me the time off from our tough pre-season."

Brave Borough bow out of Trophy

HARINGEY BOROUGH'S impressive run in the FA Trophy finally came to an end on Monday night when they were beaten 3-0 at Hitchin Town in a second qualifying round

Borough had stunned Ryman Division One South leaders Folkestone Invicta and Southern Premier Division outfit Dunstable Town to reach this stage, and they came close to securing another victory over Southern Premier opposition in Hitchin during Saturday's initial tie - taking the lead and having a penalty saved before eventually being held to a 1-1 draw.

But Hitchin's quality shone through in the replay, taking the lead through Brett Donnelly after just four minutes.

Kane Smith added a terrific second on 26 minutes, while Donnelly set the seal on Hitchin's triumph by scoring a third with seven minutes remaining.

Saturday's match saw Hitchin initially hold the upper hand without having much of an end product - although Jonny McNamara did fire wide from a good position.

It was Borough who came closest to breaking the deadlock prior to the interval though as Rakim Richards' header was cleared off the line by Smith.

And the hosts broke the deadlock on 57 minutes when Carl Griffiths fed Anthony McDonald down the left and he chipped a cross into the path of Daniel Aristidou, who had time to bring the ball under control before firing into the net.

Borough were then gifted a golden opportunity to double their advantage when they were awarded a penalty for Josh Bickerstaff's foul on Griffiths, but keeper Charlie Horlock was equal to the challenge as he managed to save Griffiths' spot kick.

This was to prove a key moment in the match as Hitchin grabbed an equaliser on 72 minutes when the unfortunate Aaron Scott could only head Smith's cross into his own net.

Both teams pressed for a winner in the closing stages, but to no avail as the clash ended all square to set up Monday's replay.

Haringey Borough host Heybridge Swifts in Ryman League Division One North on Saturday (3pm).
